Notes for Benjamin Canning:

Benjamin Canning was the son of Charles Canning and Hannah Whitlock. He was born, November 12, 1857, in Deddington, Oxfordshire, England. He received his early education and spent several years of his early childhood in Deddington and later the family moved to Loxley, Warwickshire, England, where his father was employed as a teamster and caretaker of horses.

In Loxley, with Charles Canning and William Gomm employed for the same work, there developed a little jealousy between them for each was trying to care for his horses a little better than the other. This jealousy did not remain with the men alone for it entered into the families. This feeling in the two families prevented them from visiting one another more than seldom and as such had an effect on the children by keeping them somewhat apart. However Benjamin's sister Laura became very friendly with Hannah Gomm and throughout life they remained vast and dear friends even though they lived in distant lands. Benjamin became friends with Hannah through this relationship and eventually married her.

During his early youth Benjamin came in contact with missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day-Sa1nts and was converted, being baptized, August 24, 1877. Due to the feelings of his parents and his employer toward the church and the converts, it was necessary for him to keep his membership a secret (which he did until after he arrived in Salt Lake City, Utah). After being baptized into the Church he desired to go to Zion, as it was then called. His girlfriend Hannah Gomm, also a member of the church, likewise had the desire to go to America, so as their friendship grew they planned together to make such a trip. To prepare for this they each saved from their earnings whatever they could and placed it together in a small wooden box. When the time came for them to go they had saved enough to be able to pay their transportation in gold.

On 19 May 1878, they were married at Kirtlington, Oxfordshire, England. The following day they were taken by carriage to the railroad station about four miles away, where they took the train to Birmingham, then the District Headquarters of the Church where a company of Saints were assembling for the trip to America and the Rocky Mountains of Utah. From here they took the train to Liverpool where they embarked for America on the steam ship "Nevada" 25 May 1878.

Just as they were to embark an incident happened that was quite unique in those days (and currently for that matter). Just as they were leaving, a man and woman with two small children approached them with tears in their eyes and pleaded that their children be taken as Benjamin and Hannah's children to America. Every effort to persuade them to keep their children until the day they too could make the trip was to no avail. Apparently nothing but a straight refusal would be of any effect and this, Benjamin and Hannah could not do under the strange circumstances. They granted the request and accepted the responsibility. The little girl being cared for by the Cannings under the name Rose Canning, while the little boy went with Thomas Judd who was in charge of the company. With tearful eyes and evidence of joy, the parents with a hug and a kiss for their children, and with an expression of thanks in their hour of sacrifice bid them a fond goodbye. What a sacrifice to make; how painful yet noble and beautiful Benjamin was very active in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day-Sa1nts and was a section forman for the railroad. His devotion to his work most likely cost him years of his life. Not seeking help for typhoid fever he had contracted, he died at age 40.

About this time she met and was smitten by a young army man (Carl La Vo) stationed at Fort Douglas in Salt Lake City. He mustered out of the army on February 19, 1923 and they were married in Salt Lake City two months later on April 16, 1923. Ivy left the area and the church (Carl was not a Mormon) as they settled in the San Francisco area. Their first born, Carl Palmer La Vo, was born on June 15, 1924 and their second Bennie Dolores La Vo on July 20, 1926. Where did the "Flournoy" in Carl Flournoy Lavo come from? Johnnie Armona Maddux's g-grandfather had a daughter Sarah who married William Flournoy. They had at least 5 children and then both parents died within months of each other and the oldest child's 15th birthday. The Flournoy children were then raised by different members of the Maddux family.
